Welcome to SMOSH Magazine

A flight of fancy undertaken at such frantic speed and intensity you'll have jet-lag for a month. Fancy jet-lag. We've packed 80+ pages full of stuff we love, stuff we hate, stuff that gets us excited and stuff that makes us question the future of humanity (we're looking at you Bieber, you monkey-abandoning lowlife). Try to make sure your face doesn't melt from gazing too long into the very face of awesomitude. Because if your face does melt, we accept no liability. According to our lawyer, we cannot stress that enough.

You've been warned...

AN OPEN LETTER TO... VASELINE

Dearest Vaseline,

You deserve better than this. You're the child of the Industrial Revolution and sheer American ingenuity. Your father Robert Cheesebrough (sweet name) created you by filtering and refining the greasy discharge left behind on oil rigs (presciently known as "Rod Wax,") into something useful. He created you, Vaseline, out of gumption and whimsy. And grease. Mostly grease. But Korean artist Jung-ki Beak has made a mockery of you by making this ridiculous "armor" as part of some sick excuse for an art project. You're the stuff Muhammad Ali rubbed on his face and body so opponents' punches would slide right off! The same greasy goodness that keeps long-distance swimmers from freezing as they stroke their way to victory! The same substance that navigated us to manhood as we...embraced our inner long-distance swimmer! We want to punch Mr. Beak square in the jaw. Of course, he's probably smeared you all over his face. Our punches do nothing!

Yours in solidarity,
SMOSH

While useless in battle, Vaseline armor is at least completely chafe-proof.

STUFF WE MADE UP

Fan Fan-Fiction: Fantasy Edition

We love our fans' fan fics so much we're writing fan-fiction about them. This Month: Corny_IanCorn

As the sun set outside Mealie's diner, a young woman (whose pen name was Corny_Iancorn) sat with her laptop open, an omelet congealing untouched at the corner of her table. "I couldn't stand, and quite literally, I fell in love..." she typed, fingers flying, thoughts of Ian and Anthony melding into a single, unstoppable entity known only as "Ianthony" invading her brain, her wrists quivering with desire. On her laptop a fantasy was building, but little did she know another fantasy was about to become reality. From the corner of her eye Corny_Iancorn saw a figure in the diner's doorway. A beast with two heads, like the Ianthony of her wildest fantasies. 'Could it be?' she thought. "No," was quickly the answer, as the beast revealed itself not as Ianthony but as a two-headed grizzly on its hind legs, covered from head to toe in chainmail. "I've come to protect you" the grizzly bellowed. "Huh?" said Corny_Iancorn. "Come! We must away, to find...your mother's killer," said the bear. "My mother's alive," said Corny_Iancorn.

IRREFUTABLE FACT: Bears with two heads are three times as dangerous.

"Maybe...in this dimension," said the bear. "I'm Dennis," added his other head. "Quick, jump on this pegasus." Corny_Iancorn mounted the winged-steed. "I'm Larry," said the pegasus. "Dennis treats me like I'm second class because I only have one head. He'll probably die during this quest. It'll be fun." And with that passive-aggressive aside, Corny_Iancorn, Dennis the two-headed bear and Larry the pessimistic pegasus began an epic journey. Adventure beckoned.

ASK DOCTOR SMOSH

Flaming answers to your burning questions

By Adam Ruben, Ph.D.

Why can't we eat more than six saltines without water in one minute?
Ah, the famous "Saltine Challenge." It ranks right up there with "If I drink a gallon of milk in an hour, will the other frat guys accept me?" and "If I eat a tablespoon of cinnamon, should society allow me to have children?" The whole reason you can't eat them is a purely physical one: Saltines are very dry, you need saliva to swallow, and you don't have enough to swallow something so dry. Your body makes about one milliliter of saliva during the minute you're eating the crackers, and six saltines absorb more than one milliliter of saliva. "But there's a YouTube video of a guy eating nine!" you say with a voice I'd like to silence by stuffing your mouth with saltines. Yeah. That's the other thing about this challenge. It's not impossible to eat six saltines in a minute—it's just very hard. That person on YouTube who can do it isn't necessarily faking. He or she may just have overactive salivary glands. Which is something they should brag about to absolutely no one.

How come some people pee a little when they're scared?
There's an area of your brainstem called the pontine micturition center (PMC), and when your bladder becomes full, it says, "Pee! Pee now!" Another part of your brain called the prefrontal cortex says "No, you idiot, don't pee now. We're in public." But a third part of the brain, the limbic system, can interrupt the "No, don't pee now" message in moments of sheer terror. And often you need new shorts.

What's up with morning breath, and how can I get rid of it?
Bacteria live inside you. The anaerobic (oxygen-less) ones that live on your tongue have a warm, wet place to grow with lots of little hiding places to chill in. And happy bacteria love to make noxious-smelling gases, and they thrive while you sleep. To fight back, use a toothbrush, dredge the bacteria from between your teeth with a little floss and napalm the suckers with mouthwash. Every day. Forever.

MARI ANSWERS...

Questions originally intended for former President George W. Bush

We fulfilled every fanboy's dream and asked Mari a bunch of questions. Questions stolen from a magazine our grandma read in January 2011. She had no idea.

Jimmy Carter does Habitat for Humanity. Bill Clinton has worked on global AIDS. Do you have any big plans like that?
I should change the background on my Twitter page. It blinds people.

At 40 you gave up drinking. By 50 you were governor of Texas. At 55 you were president. What do you do for an encore? How do you go from 100 mph to 10 mph?
I make a viral video on YouTube featuring ex-presidents, with cats. And nudity. Lots of nudity. Oh, and syrup. If syrup were involved that would also slow it down. And changing the frame rate. So old men, cats, nudity, and syrup at like, 18 frames per second. That's the answer.

You've won just about everything you've set out to get in life. What are your secrets for winning? How much of it do you attribute to family? Luck? Persistence?
It's 90 percent family, one percent luck, and 90 percent persistence. That all adds up. Trust me. I'm Asian, and I'm good at math.

Your private image is often different from what is portrayed in public. Do you ever find these misperceptions hurtful?
Yes. They hurt my soul. I cry alone in the dark in the corner of my room every night. But misperceptions don't sting nearly as much as bees do, and I still love bees. I'm not sure what that means, but I'm not allergic to misperceptions, if that's what you're asking.

Your chapter on Afghanistan is fascinating. But how do you feel when things that seem to be a win start looking like a long shot?
I feel that I have to look at it differently. Probably that I'm looking at it wrong. I reassess and then proceed to use the Force. The person that I am today is probably the complete opposite of the person I used to be. I was extremely introverted. In many ways, I'm still introverted, I've just learned to communicate with people. For me, doing anything involving speaking in front of an audience was a long shot. I was in my second year of college as a radio major, and I quit that major to become a writer and English major because I hated my voice so much. And now things have changed, obviously. I think it's been an eye-opener to not put limits on myself or any of my peers. I guess what I'm saying is, if it looks like a long shot, stick it out, and make it a win. Like I said, it's 90 percent persistence.

Any lessons for young people?
Don't listen to trolls. If you feed the trolls, they'll only multiply. You should focus on the people who are nice to you.

Do you look forward to the role of grandpa?
I had no idea you knew that I was a man! But now that the truth is out, absolutely. It's my dream to lie to little children, and they'll listen to me because of all the candy I'll be giving away. Plus old people get a pass on wearing Depends. And those seem attractive for obvious reasons, but no one wants to own it. I'm actually interested to see what percent of serious gamers secretly use Depends. When we start seeing WOW-themed diapers, then we'll know the world has changed. Probably for the better.

Are you surprised by the way your life turned out?
Everyday. It's amazing how many cool people I get to interact with who not only say "follow your dreams" or passions but actually do it and live it. And I get to do that too. That's awesome.

What else would you love to do?
I'd love to learn how to ride a bicycle. I never learned because I had a very sad childhood. I'm kidding. Batman had a sad childhood. I was just scared of bikes.

Yep...that's really my mom. We almost have the same hair!

An Interview with Anthony's Mom

A few questions for the sweetest woman who has ever lived.

What was your initial reaction to the Dixon Cider video?
Shocked. I was shocked! I wasn't expecting to see what I saw. It was a little over the top.
Do you have an overall favorite part of the Dixon Cider video?
Not really. But I do like it when Anthony dresses like a girl in his videos. I always think that's funny.
What do you find more offensive: the sexual nature of the Dixon Cider video or that its central premise is a pun?
I did think it went on a little long for one joke, but I think the content was more offensive.
What are the odds of this song being played at your son's wedding?
None. Zero. That won't be happening. Dixon Cider would not be a very good wedding song. It's not very romantic.

These Are Not the Photos You Are Looking For

While creating this magazine, we scoured the world wide web for photos. Some of our search results were surprising.

Golden Toilet
We can't even be upset, because...puppies! But we really did mean a toilet made of gold. Maybe even a whole bathroom.

Sleeping Bag
We were looking for a nice, restful piece of camping equipment, what we got was a surefire cure for a bad hair day.

Times Square
Actually, this is more of a cube...and we're pretty sure that's not where the "times" part comes from, either.

PRANK OF THE MONTH

"The Office Throne"

Does your work buddy act above you, lording down decries as if by divine right? Give them the royal treatment by replacing their office chair with a throne made of the finest porcelain! For bonus points, lock the toilet to their desk so jealous types won't steal it! They'll thank you, and your boss will as well. Think about how much more productive your co-worker will be when they don't have to get up for bathroom breaks!

OFFICE WARFARE

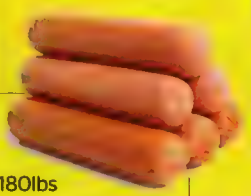
What's the Wager?

Every month, we pit two of our own against each other for video game glory. Loser does something they'd really rather not do. Game on!

Wager #1 The Game: Goldeneye '64

The Weapons Pistols

The Stakes Loser drinks a shot glass full of that weird liquid matter that builds up on the inside of hot dog packages.



The Players

Tim

- Height: 5'11 / Weight: 180lbs
- Character: James Bond
- Preferred Hot Dog Toppings: Chili and Cheese
- Last Wager Made: He's almost positive it was a drinking contest.
- Interesting Fact: 12 percent of his bodyweight is beard!

Jim

- Height: 6'0" / Weight: 185lbs
- Character: Alec Trevelyan
- Preferred Hot Dog Toppings: Mustard and Sauerkraut
- Last Wager Made: Ever wonder what they call Russian Roulette in Russia?
- Interesting Fact: Five o'clock shadow grows in by noon!

First Player to 20 Kills Escapes the Hot Dog Water...

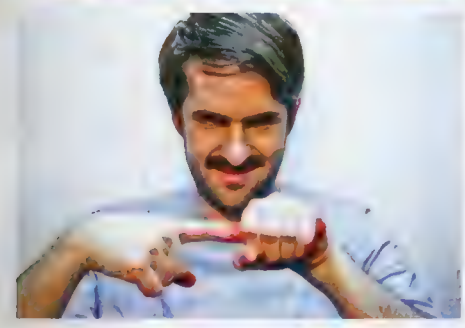
After a strong initial start in which both players found the coveted Cougar Magnum, an early body armor discovery helped Jim take a lead of five points to one. The glass of pinkish chunky liquid sat on a nearby desk, mercilessly (if silently) taunting both players. Tim was able to take advantage of the superior magazine capacity of the Dostovei while Jim was reloading his bulky revolver, and very nearly made a comeback, but Jim eked out a 20-13 victory after 21 minutes of gameplay.

BLAST FROM THE PAST

Things of Yesteryear

"Who invented the 'sex' gesture?"

Scholars agree people have been representing sexy times with their fingers since at least the Middle Ages, when even whispering the word "coitus" would get a Crusade called on you.



The gesture works by taking the finger of one hand and inserting it into a hole made by the other hand. If you don't know what represents what, you're either too stupid to procreate or you learned about anatomy from a bad cave painting.

A heated debate exists on the appropriate length of time to perform the gesture. Too short, and you may out yourself as having a "problem," but you don't want to risk blisters on the finger by being too enthusiastic. Ever. Blisters are bad.

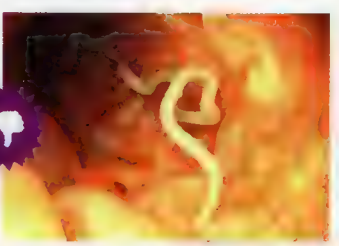
Stupid "Get Slim" Ideas

These insane diets will get you skinny, fast! They'll also kill you.

The Air Diet
How It Works: Go through the motions of eating, but don't eat anything. Your body will think you ate, but all you really did was mime what a sane person does at least three times a day.
Why It's Crazy You'll most definitely die. At least you'll look thin!



The Tapeworm Diet
How It Works: Eat a tape worm and no matter what you ingest, you'll never gain weight (because there is a worm inside you devouring your food).
Why It's Crazy "Eat a tape worm..."

The Cotton Ball Diet
How It Works: Soak cotton balls in water and swallow them. They will expand in your stomach, creating the effect of being full.

ADVICE WE HEARD SOMEWHERE ELSE

The Month in Lady Mags

Sure, all magazines can get weird from time to time. Especially those magazines that come into existence in the SMOSH house. But we really can't hold a candle to the amount of strange and disturbing information packed into the average magazine marketed towards women, and this month was no exception. From an owner's manual for boobs (because they're like cars!) to some kind of mandatory totalitarian wardrobe schedule, we picked out the best, most terrifying, and just plain strangest articles from the mags women are allegedly reading right now. For example, some words you didn't know existed: Guy-eting (v.)--When a man goes on a diet; or Bracial (n.) A facial for your breasts. We're not touching that one. Pun intended.

Sammy The Sloth says:

"The photographer caught the precise moment when Ian and Anthony realized they love Allure magazine."

BEAUTY EMERGENCY!
Last-Minute Date?
Spontaneity is cool but can leave you scrambling to look sexy. Tackle a last-minute date dilemma in the time you've got 70

Cosmopolitan advised girls preparing for a last-minute date to use lipstick on their cheeks to add a glow, and to shower at the gym when pressed for time...'cause there's nothing sexier than a drifter in clown makeup. No time to shower? Use baby wipes! Or...postpone for a half hour?

THE TRUTH ABOUT FRIENDVY
We've all been there: a friend's life suddenly seems charmed while your own success feels as hard to come by as a discontinued lipstick. But friendvy doesn't have to ruin your bond—a little envy can even make you (and your friendship) stronger. Here's how 122

Cosmo struck again with some more blindingly-useful info, telling women they're totes irreparably envious of their best friend. They even invented another word, "friendvy," an expression for when you're so jealous of your friend's life all you want to do is eat gravy.

Nice Rack! Proclaims the cover of Allure magazine's July issue. Inside, an extensive, eight-page guide to breasts. For example, were you aware guys like to look at them? Now you know.

Hey, eyes over here! Allure lists the average bra size as 36DD (say what?), notes women who want better cleavage should avoid chest presses with weights, and tells folks considering implants "you can't copy another woman's breasts". Unless you use a Xerox.

The Month in Outfits
Midsummer wardrobe update! Grab four basic pieces, make them yours (like our stylists d...), and wear till fall.
Your Easy Style Updates

In Glamour, ladies were treated to a spread of 31 outfits, one for each day of the month. That way, all free will is eliminated from the process of picking out your clothes! Good news for guys? Apparently you can buy a girl an entire month's worth of outfits by supplying her with four simple items. Bad news? She has to have 87 other things to match them.

US Weekly* shared 25 things you didn't know about Valerie Bertinelli: For example, she drives a golf cart to work, and is apparently an actress!

SMOSH TEACHES YOU...

How To Do A Sean Connery Impression

Step 1: Don't.
Seriously. Don't do a Sean Connery impression. You will gain nothing but heartache and pain.

Step 2: Accept a life of heartache and pain.
As well as the knowledge that you may very well lose all of your friends. But once you've mastered your impression, you can convincingly crow "I loved you, I trusted you, and you betrayed me!" just like Connery in First Knight.

Step 3: Practice!
Lock yourself in your room for five weeks. Don't eat, don't sleep, don't do anything but practice your Sean Connery ramblings. You'll feel like you've been imprisoned at Alcatraz. Just keep saying "Welcome to the Rock," over and over.

Step 4: Shower.
Your cries of how "losers always whine about their best" will sound better echoing off the tile walls. Plus, you've been sitting in your own filth for over a month. You stink.

Step 5: Go for it!
Start by unveiling your "we named the dog Indiana" sneers to people who would have a hard time slaughtering you while you sleep: Your mother. Your grandparents. Your dog.

Step 6: Become famous!
Your success with your Connery impression will convince you normal people want to hear you do it all the time. But they don't. And someone will end up murdering you. But you'll be known as the only person ever to be killed simply for doing an impression. You're the man now, dog!

Dear Abby ANTHONY

RESPONDING TO ABBY'S LETTERS, 50 YEARS AFTER THE FACT.

Because when you need help, you turn to a stranger.

For something like a hundred decades, Dear Abby helped anyone who could write a letter deal with their problems, one newspaper column at a time. We looked into the past to see what types of issues folks were struggling with 50 years ago this month–then gave Abby's answers reasonable update.

June, 1963

Dear Abby,
How long is a high school senior obligated to a young lady after he has invited her to the senior prom? Or perhaps I should put it this way: How long should a young lady keep a young man waiting for her answer to his invitation. At this writing, our son has been kept dangling for 72 hours.
-"Pinky"

"Pinky",
There are a few milestones in a girl's life you can bet on for an immediate response if she's interested. One of these happens to be prom. Abby told Pinky 24 hours was the cutoff for their son's hopes of scoring with this girl on prom night, but that was 50 years ago. These days if she doesn't answer your son with an excited "yes!" right then he should move on. Also, sweet St. Nic Cage, stop writing to the local papers on your son's behalf; you're the reason he's not getting any.

Dear Abby,
I am a girl who is almost 12 years old and my mother never told me the "facts of life." How can I get her to tell me soon? If she finds out I already know, she will kill me.
- Should Know

Should Know,
Abby advised to approach your mom with all of your questions and have a tense, yet informative, heart to heart, but I'm going to have to disagree. Nothing will ever be as soul-crushingly, ninja-kick-to-the-neck awkward as talking to your mom about sex, birds and bees or birds and bees having sex. They didn't have the internets in the 60s, so relying on Mommy for "the talk" may have been understandable. Not now. Get some Starbucks, tap their WiFi and find reliable answers about the "facts of life". What I'm trying to say is, Google is your mom now. Go ask her about why you should shave your legs.

Dear Abby,
My parents are getting very crabby in their old age. Every time I want to do something, they think of a million things that can go wrong. I have been talking this over with my friends and they tell me that their parents are the same way. Parents today are too strict about everything. My parents were always this way, but they seem to be getting worse. What can I do?
- "Prisoner"

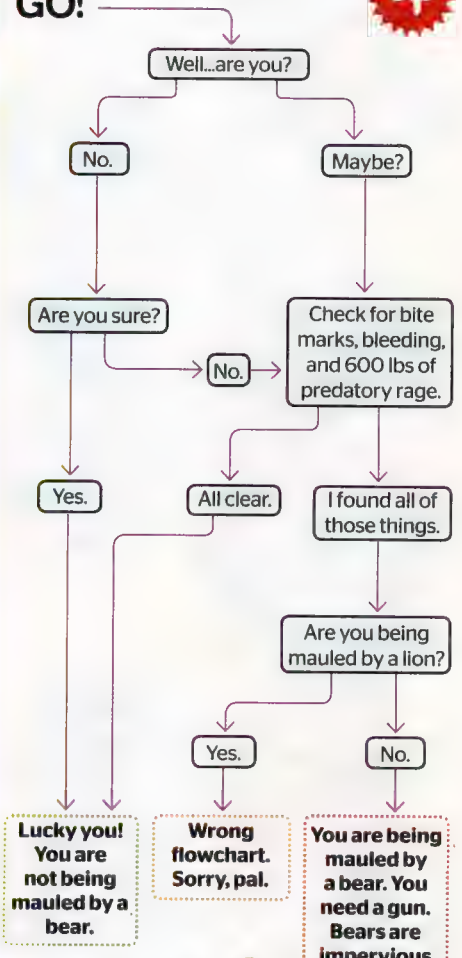
"Prisoner",
If you and your friends are anything like me and mine, your idea of "doing something" includes a ramp, some dart guns, and someone who owns a moped. On that note, I'm going to agree with Abby's advice from back then: Your parents know how to keep you safe. The times may have changed, but the level of stupidity that lives within us has not. Be grateful you have parents who care. Or just wait a few years, apply to a party school, and get it out of your system then, like a normal person.

Are you being mauled by a bear?

A flowchart.



GO!
Well...are you?
No.
Maybe?
Are you sure?
No.
Check for bite marks, bleeding, and 600 lbs of predatory rage.
Yes.
All clear.
I found all of those things.
Are you being mauled by a lion?
Yes.
No.
Lucky you! You are not being mauled by a bear.
Wrong flowchart. Sorry, pal.
You are being mauled by a bear. You need a gun. Bears are impervious to flowcharts.

Roundtable

A serious debate with serious people. This Month: "Which celebrity would be humanity's best hope in the event of an alien invasion?"

"That would have to be Pac-man because he's super nice, a great ambassador for Earth, and runs away from trouble all the time. Unless you get him pissed of course and then he's gonna eat the crap outta their alien asses."

Robbie
Teleporting Fat Guy

"Look man, if aliens come down here that's gonna be all awesome and stuff. But if they get all crazy, I'm gonna get my man Snoop Lion on the case and we're gonna cut their balls off with my freakin' binky."

"If there's an alien attack, the first person I'm gonna call is Samuel L. Jackson. I mean, seriously, who's gonna mess with Samuel L. Mother-Bleepin' Jackson?"

Hector
Smosh Babies

"If aliens invade I will fire a heat beam from my breasts to incinerate their bodies, leaving only their heads, which I will hurl into orbit around the Earth. That way, when other alien species fly by they will see the dismembered heads of those who opposed us, and flee in terror."

Spence
Zombies vs. Ninjas

"Obviously the greatest singer/songwriter/rapper Rusty Sprinkler from Shut Up! Cartoons' own Pubertina series. His sweet stare, pouty lips and Rusty red locks would put the aliens in a 'Sprinkle' trance."

"Amanda Bynes. She best fits in with the cliche, 'It's just crazy enough to work.' Plus, all that plastic surgery will make for effective body armor, and whatever virus is infecting her brain may just be the hope we need!"

A conversation with a totally different Anthony Padilla.

This month, Anthony Padilla of San Antonio, TX!

Note: We asked Anthony to send us a picture, but he couldn't figure out how to email us one since he grew up during World War II. We selected a picture with his permission based mainly on the sound of his voice. Pretty much a win for all of us.

Thanks for taking the time to talk with us, Anthony! Let's start with the basics: How old are you?
81.
Have you lived in San Antonio, TX for your entire life?
Yes, since 1963.
Interesting! Let's talk about how you spend your free time. Do you surf YouTube a lot?
...YouTube?
Yeah, it's a video-sharing website on the Internet. Have you ever used it?
...No.
OK, I guess you're a Vimeo guy. Next question: Do you enjoy a cold glass of Dixon Cider?
A glass of what?
Dixon Cider. It's a special brand. Have you ever enjoyed its sweet, refreshing taste?
...No, I never drink it.
Do you ever speak like a caveman? And if so, how often?
What?
You know, going up to a stranger and saying "ooga ooga" or something like that.
....No I don't think so.
OK. Do you know the whereabouts of Boxman?
Box?
Boxman. B-O-X-M-A-N
...Man?.....No.
Let's talk Pokémon. Fire-Type is clearly the best, right? Charmander totes pwnz!
I have no idea what you're talking about.
OK, last question: Who is your best friend and why?
[silence]
It's a tough question. Are you married?
Yes.
Would you consider your wife to be your best friend?
Yes.
Fantastic! Thanks for talking with us Anthony!
[silence]
Ok, bye!

SMOSH GAMES ALLIANCE

Winter will be here soon enough. Here's what you'll spend yours locked away with.

Grand Theft Auto V

We know that we're definitely spending some serious time in the state of San Andreas this fall when the latest title in the Grand Theft Auto series hits stores. We also know that another GTA game means another giant debate about whether or not video games are responsible for violence, death, and poverty. They aren't. But they are responsible for sucking you in for hours at a time as you explore a fully realized world where you can do just about anything but afford a house for the first half of gameplay. That said, there's plenty of mischief to be made in Los Santos, and we can't wait to get started.

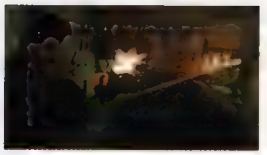
"Saint's Row is one of my favorite series ever. It takes the sandbox gameplay of the GTA series and cranks it to 11. You really can do anything."

Saints Row IV

The Third Street Saints are back, and this time, they run the free-world. Literally. Their leader is the President. In the new installment of the franchise, players have access to an arsenal of alien weapons that give them incredible superpowers including the ability to come back to life close to the same spot they've died, and to completely "pause" time so you can go grab a sandwich.

August 20



New Super Luigi U

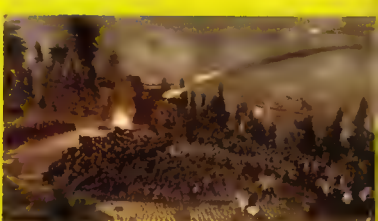
The standalone version of Luigi's first starring role will be available in late August. For gamers who already have the new Super Mario Brothers U, the wait is already over!

August 25

Total War: Rome 2

In this new strategy game from the Total War franchise, you get to create the world's first superpower as you single-handedly lay kingdoms to waste. Booyah.

September 3



Lost Planet 3

Returning to the frightening and desolate landscape of E.D.N III, fans of the Lost Planet series will follow Jim, the hero, as he tries to get back to Earth. Spoiler alert: it's going to be fairly difficult because of all the creatures in his way.

August 27

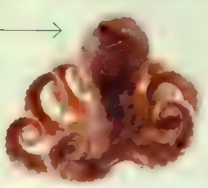
I'M IN THIS GAME!

Lost Planet Creature Guide

In Lost Planet, animals have eaten and mauled their way up the food chain. Keep an eye on these creatures, because they're definitely watching you.

Octopi

In 2005, an octopus at the Santa Monica Pier Aquarium disassembled the recycling system valve on his tank, flooding the entire aquarium in the process. Scary.



Great White Sharks

Picture this: The moisture level in Earth's atmosphere rises to the point that fish mutate and flop around on dry land. Now picture one of those mutant fish has teeth like these.

Red Pandas

Like raccoons on cute-roids, they've stormed the internet. We can't stop clicking, and they can't be stopped.

Rhinos

In a couple of thousand years, rhinoceroses will have evolved. That's particularly scary since they're already thousand-pound armored beasts sporting giant horns to impale you through the groin with.

HOW TO

HANDLE ANY RELATIONSHIP SITUATION LIKE A NINJA

LOOKING GOOD IN BLACK AND KEEPING YOUR MOUTH SHUT ARE A GOOD PLACE TO START...

THE IMPOSSIBLE "ARM-OVER-THE-SHOULDER-DURING-MOVIE" MANEUVER

Many have tried. Many have failed. A ninja succeeds by using someone else's arm.

1

Yawns don't work. Sever the arm of an innocent bystander and drape it over your date's shoulder.

When she realizes the arm around her shoulder isn't attached to anything, she'll freak out.

Now she needs to be comforted by a real arm. A real ninja arm. Boom: second base.

THEY WANT TO TAKE THE NEXT STEP, BUT ARE AFRAID YOU'RE NOT READY.

Impossible. Ninjas are always two steps ahead.

2

Your foolish paramour assumes you will be surprised by his popping of the question.

You are ever-prepared. Nothing says "Yes, I shall marry you," like unexpected twins.

3 You're out somewhere with your date, and someone hits on them. Show the fool your glorious katana. Inform the fool they will only see it once. The next time they will only hear the pleasant swish it makes as it slides swiftly through their torso.

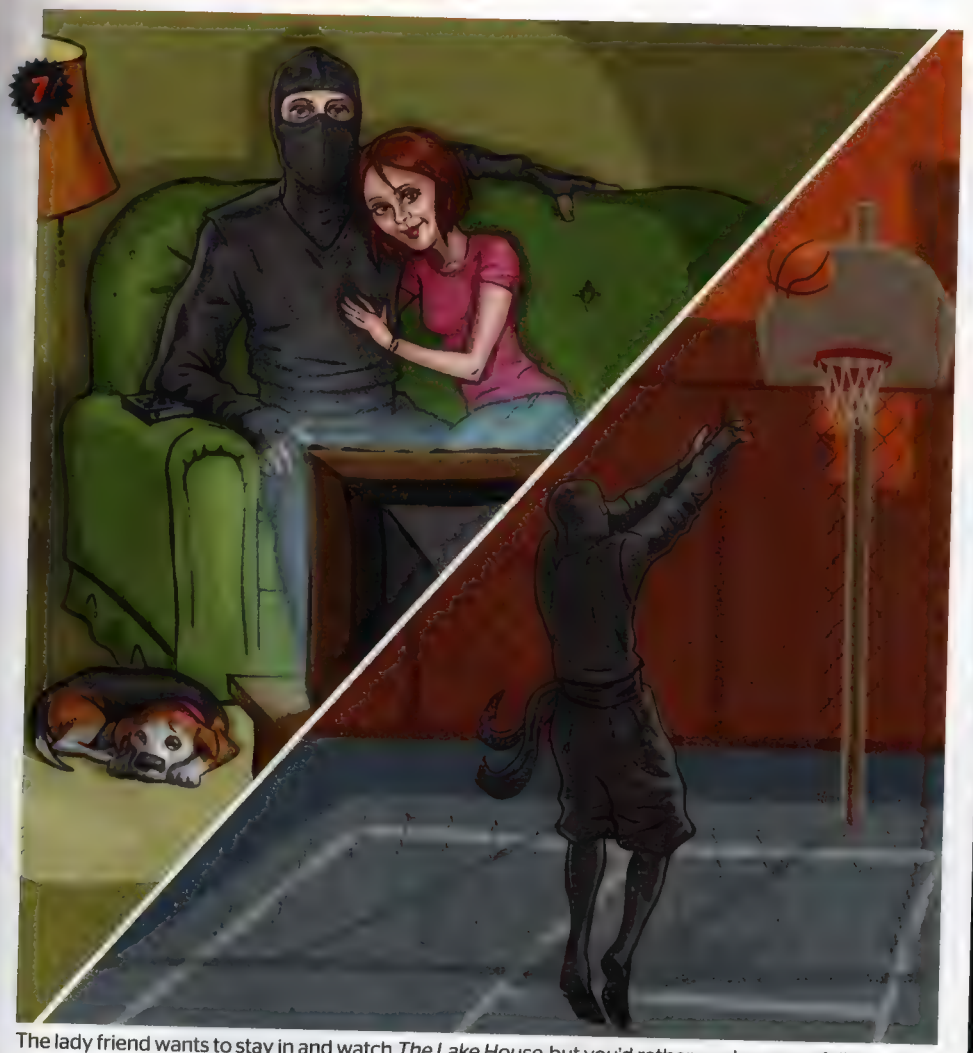
4 You see your ex while on a date Ninjas might see their exes...but their exes never see them.

5 You're meeting their parents for the first time. A ninja might be meeting their parents for the first time, but infiltrated their home weeks ago, and is therefore prepared. Usually with wine.

6 They ask you if their outfit makes them look fat. Perform seppuku (honorable ninja suicide). There is no safe way to answer this question.

THEY WANT TO GO OUT, YOU WANT TO STAY IN.

No problem. Ninjas can be in two places at once.



The lady friend wants to stay in and watch The Lake House, but you'd rather work on your fall-back j. Just focus, remember your training, and hope she doesn't realize how sweaty you're getting.

HOW TO WIN A NINJA'S HEART

It's a heck of a lot easier than killing one.

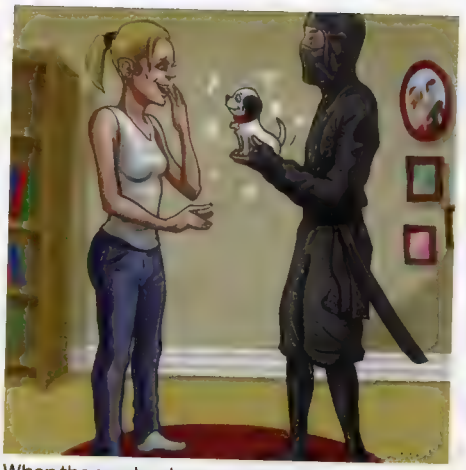
- Always sneak out in the morning. Then sneak back in. They'll be impressed.
- Compliment all of their visible features, like their eye...and their other eye.
- Always act surprised. It'll boost their confidence.
- Buy them Tiffany throwing stars.
- When they send you to the store, don't come home and place the items in the fridge. Throw them at the back of your ninja-love's head. They'll be thankful you tested their reaction time.
- When in doubt, tell them they look especially deadly.

YOU GET INTO YOUR FIRST "BIG" FIGHT.

Throw a smoke bomb. Instant puppy.

There's no telling what you did to incur their wrath, but you've got to diffuse it.

Create a diversion. Throw a smoke bomb. Hopefully they aren't allergic to salt powder.



When the smoke clears, you've got a cute puppy. Problem solved. Unless they hate cute things.

5 Places You NEVER Want to Hear Dubstep

Love it or hate it, sometimes it's downright inappropriate

- In the Produce Aisle, Testing the Ripeness of an Avocado
  You smush it, you bought it. Thanks, Beat-drop.
- On the Toilet
  Because you need to focus.
- Your Grandmother's Funeral
  Because she was more of a metal-core fan, and you should honor her memory.
- In the Dentist's Office, Recovering from Pulled Wisdom Teeth
  I'll bet you didn't think it was possible to bleed from the mouth, ears, and nose all at once.
- At a Skrillex Concert
  Who wants to spend the whole time wondering if the next seizure will be the one that kills him?

7 ACTS OF KARAOKE TERRORISM

Sing these songs, start a war.

7. "I Knew You Were Trouble" -Taylor Swift
6. "Moves Like Jagger" - Maroon 5
5. "Give Your Heart a Break" - Demi Lovato

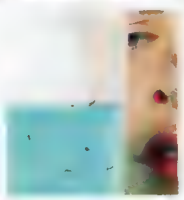
9 Marmots

8 Albino Pythons

7 Moths



6 Ants, farm.

5 Bats

4 Tarantulas

3 Bearded Dragons

2 Ants, non-farm.

1 Tamagotchi

 - Actually, mine did help me get laid one time, but only because it died. The sex was, like, a sympathy thing.

3 Places on Your Face You Shouldn't Grow Hair

Your Upper Lip, Just Under Your Nose

SHUT UP! You're not Michael Jordan and you're not reclaiming the Hitler mustache for normal people. Just let it go. That mustache killed innocent people.

Only Your Neck

There is no better way to look like a creep than to shave your whole face except for your underbeard. It's like washing your whole body except your junk.

Anywhere if You're a Girl

There's a very simple question you can ask yourself, ladies: "Do I have a mustache?" If the answer is "maybe," it may as well be "yes." Wax it off.

5 Worst Places to Learn Parkour

A Child's Bouncey Castle
No amount of epic athleticism will help you when there are 18 snotty kids jumping around without their shoes on.

In Solitary Confinement
When you screw up in prison they take away all your privileges, which includes watching District B13 with the rest of the Aryan Brotherhood.

An Airline Terminal
Short of saying "I'm wearing a bomb" this is the fastest way to get tazed by the TSA.

in a rowboat
There's no such thing as underwater parkour. It's synchronized swimming, or water aerobics.

Iowa
Free-running through field after field is essentially just running freely. Plus, Iowa's really boring.

5 DISCONTINUED JUNK FOODS WE CRAVE

Doritos 3D
Everything is better in 3D. Avatar was a Pocahontas knock-off but it was in 3D so it was amazing. Doritos 3D were the Avatar of the chip world.

French Toast Crunch Cereal
Take Cinnamon Toast Crunch, scale back the pure sugar and replace some of it with maple syrup. We've wanted a bowl since 2006.

Tropical Blast Pop Tarts
Like Wild Berry on firetrucking steroids. We need a dose because we're starting to get the DTs.

Butterfinger BBs
The worst part about a Butterfinger bar is the lopsided chocolate to peanut butter crunch ratio. These little beauties deliciously solved that problem.

Surge
Like Mountain Dew but with more sugar. And a higher chance of juvenile diabetes. Delicious, delicious diabetes.

3 Things You Never Want to Hear Your Mom Say

"Did you know during childbirth, most women poop?"

"When I was a nudist..."

"Which push-up bra should I wear to tonight's church social?"

THE HEIGHT OF STAR WARS

Determine for yourself whether or not you're a little short for a stormtrooper.

Yoda 2'2"
He lives in the swamp and looks funny like a Duck Dynasty character able to move spaceships with his mind.

Wicket 2'7"
A slightly hairier, more George Lucas, this Ewok was the worst part of Star Wars II he had his title stolen by Jar Jar Binks.

R2-D2 3'6"
Fans love R2, a droid [illegible] beeps and boops to communicate. He was more emotive than Mark Hamill.

Young Anakin 4'1"
This cute little kid [illegible] the evil nemesis of the ancient religious order he betrayed. Then he'll hit puberty.

Darth Maul 5'7"
When the only [illegible] about you is your lightsaber, you've probably been created by a Mattel focus group.

Han Solo 5'10"
Slickest, suavest character in the Star Wars universe, which is kind of like being the tallest guy in 6th grade.

Obi Wan Kenobi 5'11"
His sub-par mentoring skills doomed all of the Jedi in the galaxy. But what a beard! We can't stay mad at this guy.

Dave 6'6"
If you watch Episode IV: [illegible] you can spot this Stormtrooper clumsily walking into a door on the Death Star.

LIKE STAR WARS? GOOD! US TOO!

And we can all agree the only thing better than Star Wars is our Star Wars" parody "Disney Star Wars" on smosh.com! Star Wars!

Princess Leia 5'7"
Sophomore year dropout, a castle in need of a crown, but making-out with homicidal maniacs Lola as a true royal.

Padmé Amidala 5'7"
Maybe the worst judge of men since Nicole Brown Simpson, Padme sticks by Anakin then dies of too many feelings.

C-3PO 5'7"
He's a little [illegible] C-3PO has the benefit of being the only member of the Rebel Alliance with actual brass balls.

Luke Skywalker 5'7"
A country lad who loves spinning Moisture and loitering at Tosche station, he learns his dad is basically space Hitler.

Mace Windu 6'1"
The toughest Jedi in the entire Order, [illegible] to die at the hands of [illegible] a squishy and a geriatric Sith Lord.

Darth Vader 6'7"
Anakin lost literally everything after the duel on Mustafar, but he gained James Earl Jones' voice. Win some, lose some.

Chewbacca 7'4"
Everyone's favorite [illegible] clothing except for his ammo belt, the Star Wars version of Never Nude Jorts.

AT-AT 74'
A colossal juggernaut of [illegible] these engineering marvels are felled by the Rebels' only secret weapon: rope.

BREAKING UP I

Breaker-Upper

No matter what side of the ending you're on, we make it tolerable.

Nobody likes it when relationships end. It's like going to the dentist after you just got dumped by your dentist. WE'RE NOT BITTER DR. WALLYSKER. WE'RE FINE. Breaking up sucks whether you're the dumper or the dumpee. Here are a few ways to lighten the mood, whether you're the heartbreaker or the heartbroken.

THE JACK

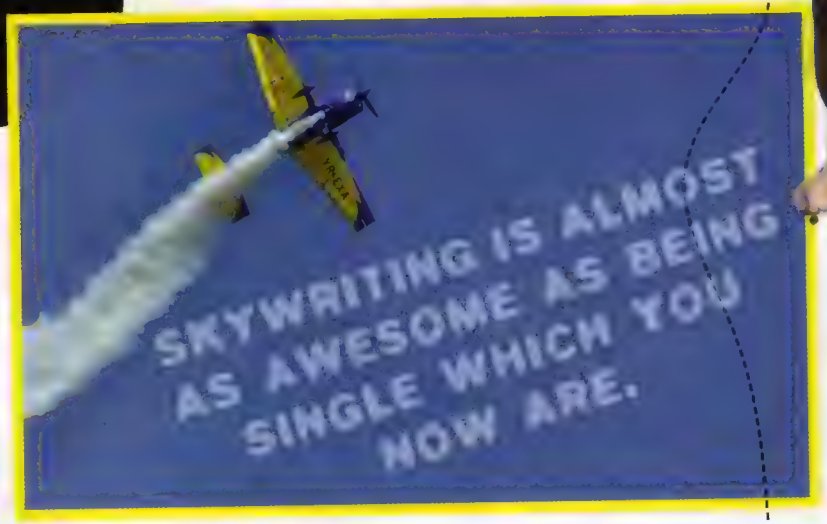
Tell your partner you've recently been diagnosed with the same disease that Robin Williams had in the movie Jack. By next year, you'll look like baby Benjamin Button. Hearing you reference two terrible films in a row should make them feel better about parting ways.

FAKE YOUR OWN DEATH!

Step one: Rent a hot air balloon. Step two: Procure a crash-test dummy, fill it with pig guts and drop the bloody, plastic man from above your soon-to-be-ex's house. Don't forget to leave a voicemail explaining your sudden, burning desire to fly a hot air balloon. When you don't come home, they'll connect the dots.

COLLECT TO LOS

Start hoarding something your partner really hates, like fingernail clippings or feral cats. They'll leave you! Plus, think of all the fingern clipping houses you could build once they leave!



IT'S A BIRD, IT'S A PLANE–IT'S OVER!

Hire a skywriter and let the miracle of flight break up for you.

AN ULTIMATUM

Tell your partner you can't be with someone who has two eyebrows. Shave one, grow a unibrow, or get out. Then ask "How much do you love me?"

~~HARD~~ FUN TO DO

Breakup-ee

THE EVIL BEEKEEPER

When your partner ends it, grin maniacally and tell them you suspected they might break up with you, which is why you carefully hid a lab culture of killer bee larvae somewhere in their house.

☆☆☆☆☆☆☆☆

I'm hot,
I'm single and
I'm desperate.

Please call me. Please. Anytime.
999-862-9990

☆☆☆☆☆☆☆☆

DON'T CALL ME, THEY'LL CALL YOU

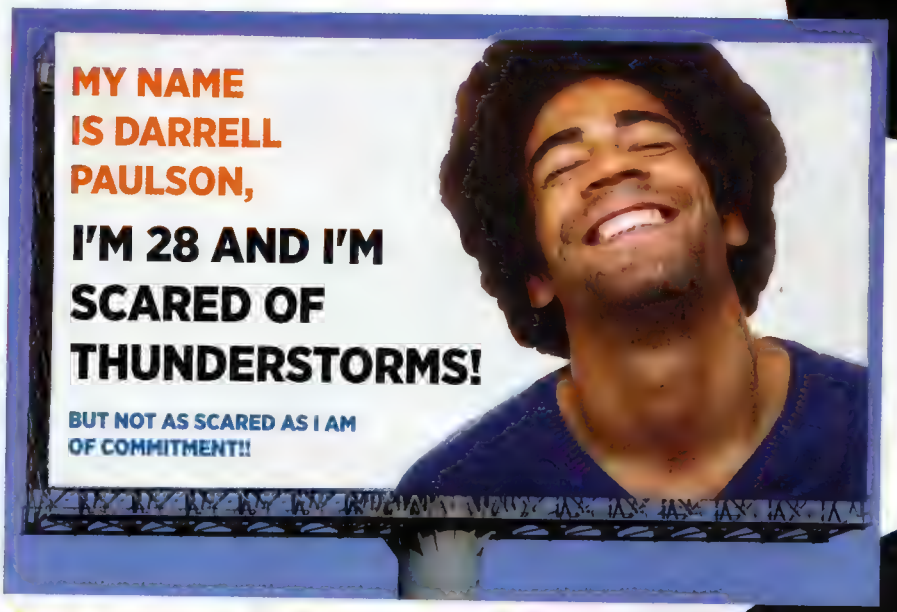
Classified ads are surprisingly inexpensive. Getting a new phone number isn't. But that's what your ex will need to do when you place their cell number in the paper letting the world know they're on the market.

THE NETFLIX QUEUE TROLL

After your partner ends things, pull out your smartphone. Log into their Netflix account and give everything they despise five stars. A small victory perhaps, but when your ex-girlfriend is watching nothing but slasher movies or your ex-boyfriend can only seem to find movies starring Hugh Grant, you'll feel a little better.

THE "NO, YOU'RE A LOSER"

Pull out a lottery ticket. Tell your partner you're sorry that now they won't be able to share the $10 million you just won.



THE "EVERYONE WILL KNOW"

Buy a billboard on a very public road or in a crowded square. Use it to divulge your ex's innermost secret. They might hate you for it, but Reddit won't.

SHOULD YOU RUN?

ARE YOU DATING A KEEPER OR A CREEP

Has a favorite J-Lo movie

Likes to call your mom

Is a groupie

Is in a rock band

Still sleeps with a stuffed animal

Has a stamp collection
Starts every sentence with, "I'm not racist or anything, but..."
They've chosen "Menendez" and "Brothers"

THINGS YOU CAN DO

Without Pants

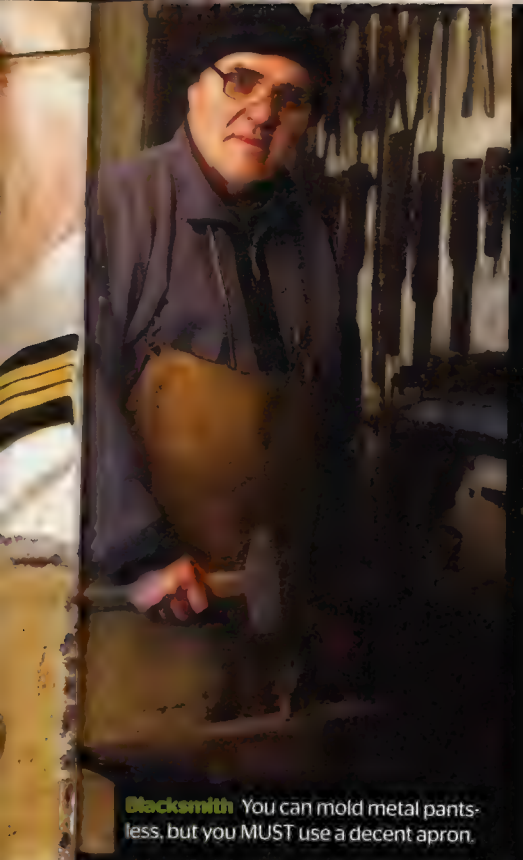
Don't let the government tell you what to do!
There are plenty of swell activities to enjoy while chilling in your undies.

Airline Pilot The security door will keep prying eyes from your junk in the skies.

Mortician Dead men tell no tales, so they'll keep quiet about your boxers.

Be a Jeopardy! Contestant "I'll take 'I'm Freeballing' for $600, Alex."

Hand Model Lot's of print models get to work topless. You get to do the opposite.



Blacksmith You can mold metal pantsless, but you MUST use a decent apron.

Work for Tips in Times Square Naked Cowboy, fake Elmo...they're all pantsless.

Toll Booth Operator As long as you're giving exact change, you're golden.

Anchorman "This just in, we've got a throbbing news story. It's a big one."

Performance Artist One of few activities where wearing pants is wrong.

Voiceover Acting Particularly if you are voicing a perpetually-pantsless duck.

99 WAYS TO CALL SOMEONE STUPID!

PROOF THAT PEOPLE HAVE BEEN DUMMIES SINCE THE DAWN OF TIME.

The world is filled with idiots. You might say it's been that way since the very start. P.T. Barnum once famously said that there's a "sucker born every minute." And "sucker" is just another word for stupid. There. That one's free. Here's 99 more...

Big Shot Bikes

A single speed bike — that is, a bike with only one gear — is the perfect way to cruise down to a friend's house. Most companies, however, lock you into whatever dull designs they think are cool. Like a famous monarchical meat patty supplier, Big Shot Bikes let's you have it your way. You can customize every aspect of the bike from handlebar curvature to the color of every part, for no additional cost. $420 bigshotbikes.com

FOR THOSE OF YOU WITH DISPOSABLE INCOME

A Solid Section of Things We Like

When you're a big-time celebrity, sometimes corporations send you all their cool stuff for free. Just because you're awesome. Or because you made a sex tape, and they're pushing a new line of night vision cameras. When you're known for being on the internet, you get sent less things. But that doesn't mean you can't search the planet for a few items that will bring you joy! That's what we've done here. It's a whole host of things we enjoy, and we think you'll enjoy them too. From a shirt that's basically an air conditioner, to a beach ball big enough to destroy Alderaan, there's something in here for you. Were you hoping to see a few pages of people wearing SMOSH clothes styled like a low-rent American Apparel ad? Good, 'cause that's totally happening. And there's also a guide to thick, juicy burritos. Best of all, most of our picks are things you can afford. You won't have to make a sex tape to get this stuff, but don't let that stop you. Keep chasing down your dreams!

EVEN MORE THINGS

Sweet Swag

If you haven't spent all your money on first-press Pokémon cards, you should catch all this stellar gear.

"No matter when you're reading this, you only have a few shopping days left until Christmas. BUY BUY BUY!!!"

WHOA, COOL TOP!

Columbia Omni Freeze Zero Shirt

Talk about an ice tee. This stretchy shirt has chemicals woven in the fabric that release when you sweat, cooling your body temperature by nearly four degrees. Perfect for late summer days or when you're sweating it out trying to talk to a lady. $40 columbia.com

Roku 3

Who needs cable? This miniscule streamer is fast, fuzz-free, and features more than 750 channels, including Amazon Instant and Netflix. Bonus: Plug the included pair of ear buds into the remote and you can listen privately while your pets are asleep. $100; roku.com

Giant Inflatable Beach Ball

This beach ball stands twelve-feet tall and weighs fourteen pounds. Use it to amp up any visit to the park, perform your best reenactment of the boulder chase from Raiders, or mercilessly wreck sandcastles at the beach. $150 thinkgeek.com

EcoXBT Speaker

Drop it, dunk it, defile it — this sweet-sounding portable Bluetooth speaker can handle the rough stuff. Water-, dust- and shock-proof, it's protected by a rubberized shell that shields its stereo speakers and also renders it buoyant: it floats so you can even pump tunes in the pool. Or the slip and slide. Or lost at sea. $130 ecoxgear.com

NERF Vortex Diatron Blaster

Listen up: Darts are out; discs are in. Why? Discs are aerodynamically superior, so you can deal more damage to your nemesis during backyard battles. This NERF sidearm is easily hidden and fires two discs at once for double the damage, to their face and ego. $20 nerf.com

Stick N Find

Always losing electronics? Suffer from short-term memory loss? Consider this your fail safe. Attach one of these adhesive coin-sized sensors to anything you're prone to lose — car keys, wallet, phone, etc. — and, via a paired app, you can locate them or be alerted if you're about to leave them behind. $60 for set of two; sticknfind.com

Water Spraying RC Helicopter

Capable of flying to heights greater than six feet, this easy-to-pilot remote control helicopter lets you perform acrobatic stunts — and strafe runs: a water canon attached just below its rotor fires up to four feet. Best flown when listening to Flight of the Valkyries.
$30 amazon.com

Sony Walkman Sports Mp3 Player

What looks like a simple pair of sport headphones is actually an all-in-one mp3 player. Upload tracks to the internal 4GB storage space, insert the wrap-around ear buds, and head to the gym, track, or even lap lane — the system is waterproof, so you can listen while drowning. $80 sony.com

August Smart Lock

Install this smart lock and you can open and close the front door via an app on your smart phone. You can also "invite" friends to the safe list so that when they arrive the door will open for them. Just pray thieves don't swipe their phone. $200 august.com

Urban Ears Slussen

The smallest DJ setup around. Insert this U-shaped adapter into your iPhone, plug your stereo wire into one end, your headphone jack into the other, and prepare to get all Daft Punk at your next party. When paired with a partnered app, the setup allows you to mix and preview tracks like a turntable pro.

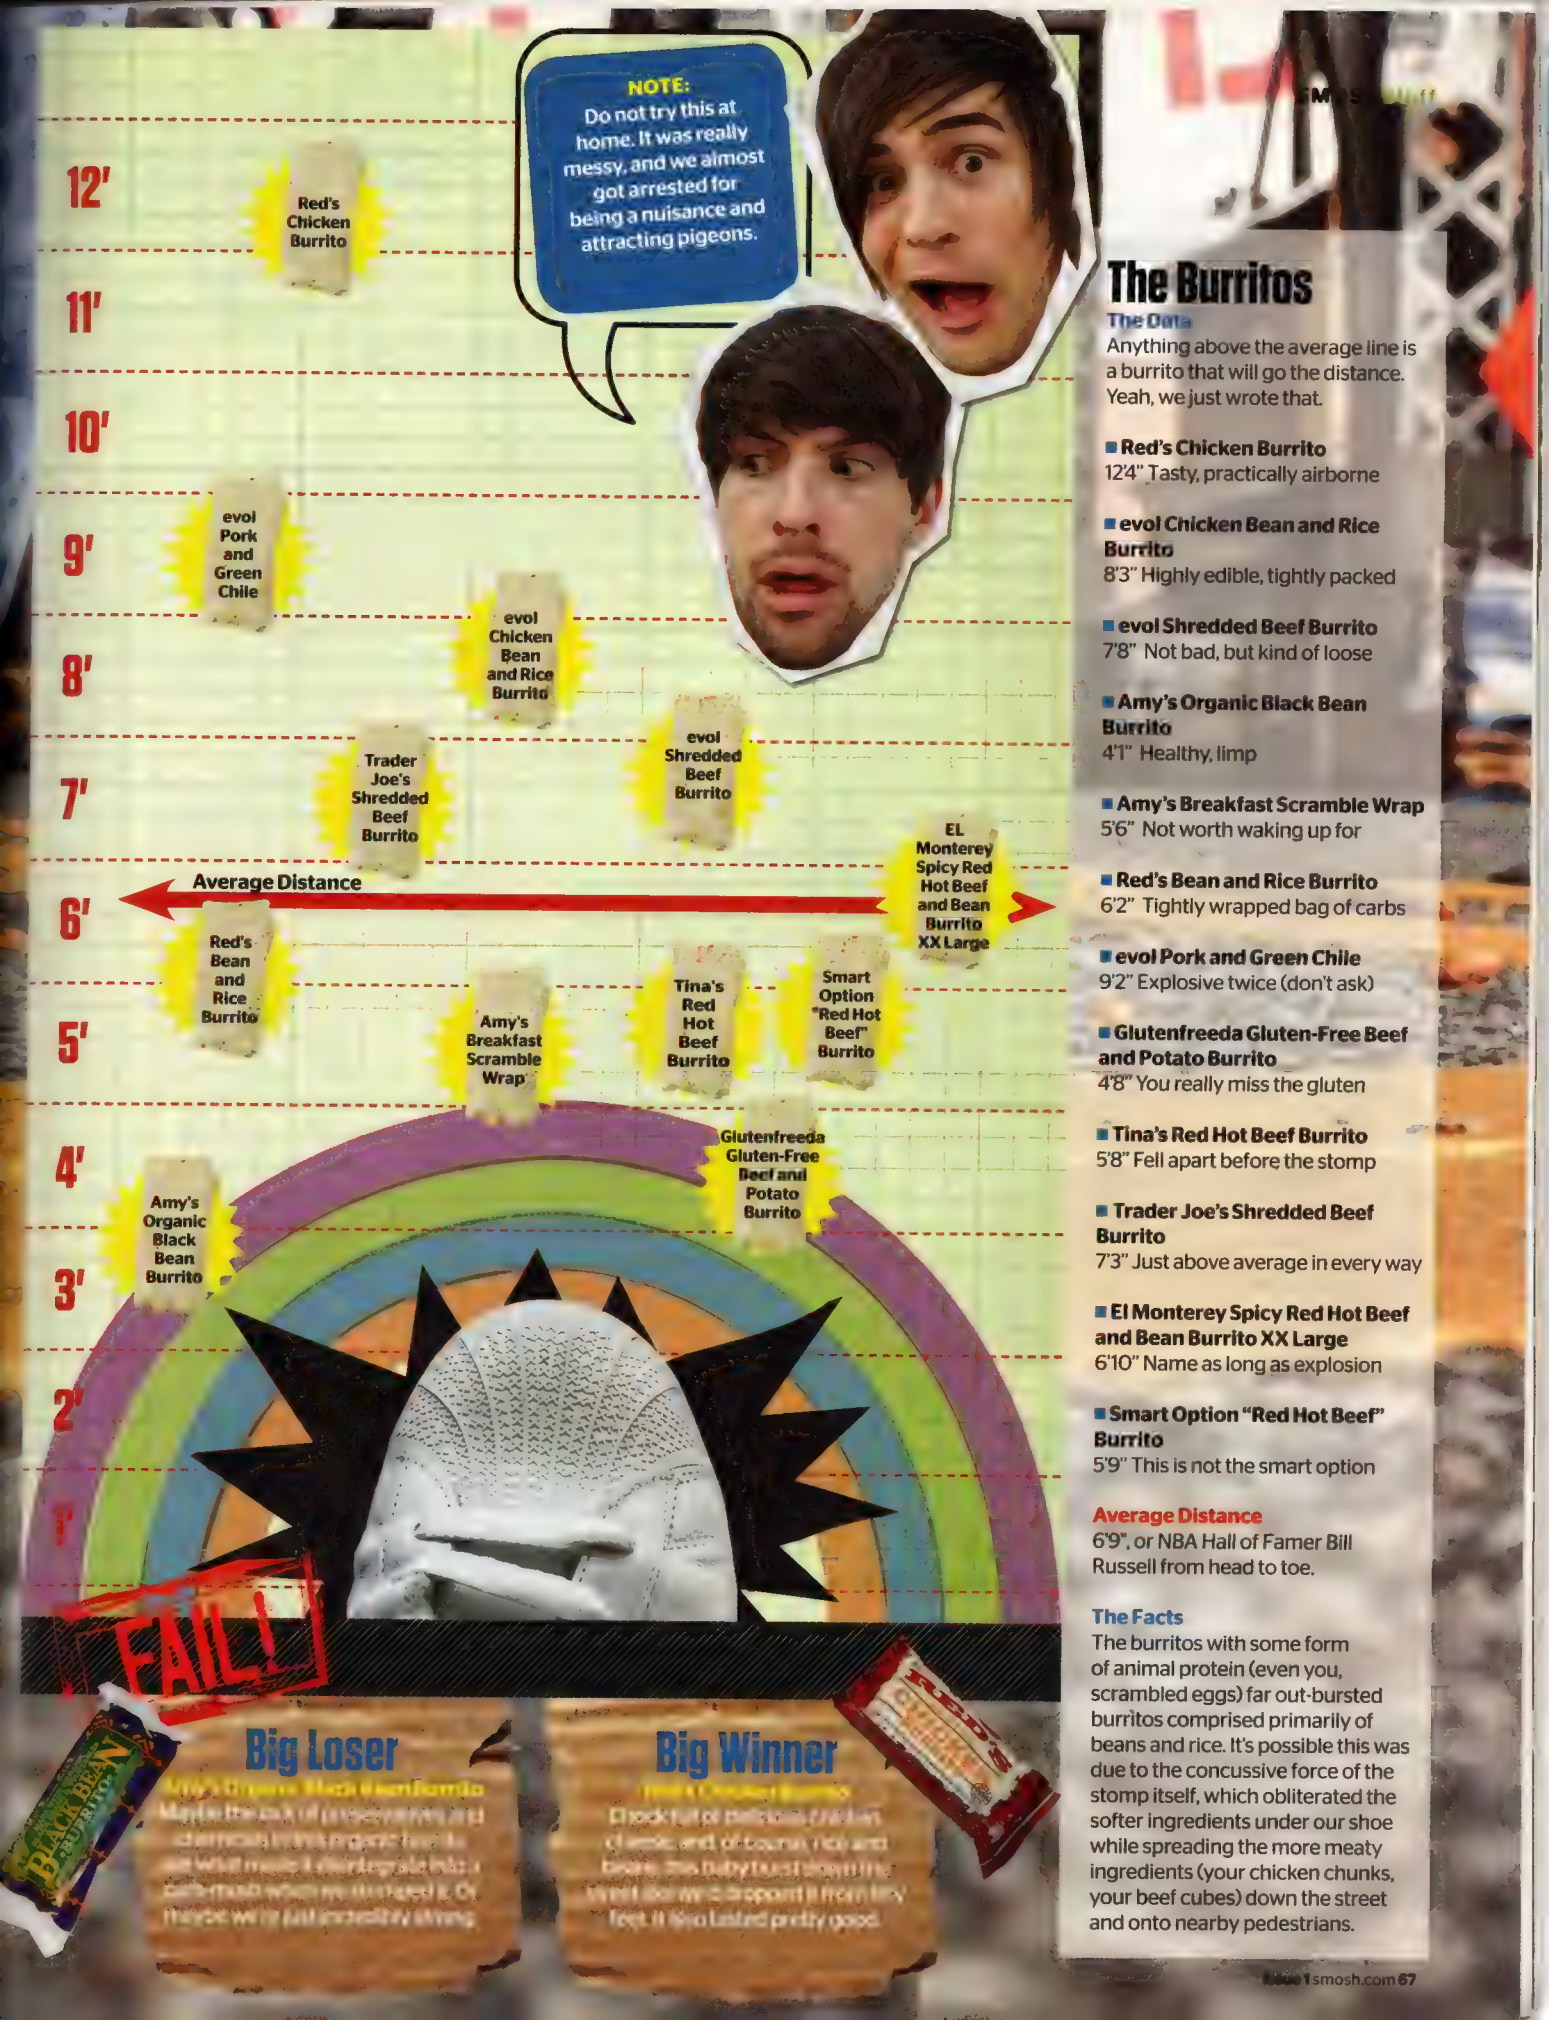
The Burrito Blast Radius

Everyone likes burritos. The portability of a sandwich, the contents of a taco dinner with all the fixins, and the deliciousness that only the simple pleasure of a doughy pocket full of rice, beans, cheese, and meat can bring. But one thing everybody hates is a limp, understuffed burrito. Is there a sight more heartbreaking in the world? We certainly don't think so. The true test of a frozen burrito is not its flavor (let's face it...it's all food), but rather its blast radius. Any episode of NCIS will tell you the tighter a shrapnel bomb is packed with material, the further it will fly when the device detonates. The same holds true for Mexican meat pockets, so we rounded up every frozen burrito we could get our hands on, cooked them up nice and hot just like mama used to do it, then took them out into the middle of a New York City street and stomped on those puppies until it was practically raining carnitas all over the place. You know...for science. Here's what we discovered...



The Burritos

The Data

Anything above the average line is a burrito that will go the distance. Yeah, we just wrote that.

- Red's Chicken Burrito
  12'4" Tasty, practically airborne
- evol Chicken Bean and Rice Burrito
  8'3" Highly edible, tightly packed
- evol Shredded Beef Burrito
  7'8" Not bad, but kind of loose
- Amy's Organic Black Bean Burrito
  4'1" Healthy, limp
- Amy's Breakfast Scramble Wrap
  5'6" Not worth waking up for
- Red's Bean and Rice Burrito
  6'2" Tightly wrapped bag of carbs
- evol Pork and Green Chile
  9'2" Explosive twice (don't ask)
- Glutenfreeda Gluten-Free Beef and Potato Burrito
  4'8" You really miss the gluten
- Tina's Red Hot Beef Burrito
  5'8" Fell apart before the stomp
- Trader Joe's Shredded Beef Burrito
  7'3" Just above average in every way
- El Monterey Spicy Red Hot Beef and Bean Burrito XX Large
  6'10" Name as long as explosion
- Smart Option "Red Hot Beef" Burrito
  5'9" This is not the smart option

Average Distance

6'9", or NBA Hall of Famer Bill Russell from head to toe.

The Facts

The burritos with some form of animal protein (even you, scrambled eggs) far out-bursted burritos comprised primarily of beans and rice. It's possible this was due to the concussive force of the stomp itself, which obliterated the softer ingredients under our shoe while spreading the more meaty ingredients (your chicken chunks, your beef cubes) down the street and onto nearby pedestrians.

FICTIONAL FOOD FREE-FOR-ALL

Doing our best to cook a meal that's not real! This Month: Milk Steak

As Seen On: It's Always Sunny in Philadelphia, Season Five "The Waitress Is Getting Married"

Charlie's favorite food is "Milk Steak," which for some reason he believes sounds fancy.

WHAT YOU'LL NEED
1 glass of milk
1 steak
Gumption

Step 1 Put the steak in a frying pan on high.

Step 2 Add milk

Step 3 Cook until gray all the way through, or about 10 minutes per side

Results Eating a milk steak is like looking into the very face of God and then hearing the words "Making you was the biggest mistake of my career, and I'm technically responsible for a whole host of plagues." There's no reason you shouldn't try eating a steak cooked in milk, but that's no endorsement. The meat got a bit tough, but that's because it was boiled "over hard," as Charlie orders it during the episode. Perhaps if we'd taken it off the stove a few minutes sooner, it wouldn't have tasted like a shoe. The warm, coagulated milk didn't help.

CRAVE

Food we'll have eaten by the time you finish this sentence.

Sonic's Peanut Butter and Bacon Shake
Peanut butter and bacon mixed with ice cream then topped with whipped cream. And also a cherry, as it seems 1,193 calories wasn't quite enough.

Dunkin' Donuts' Glazed Donut Breakfast Sandwich
Bacon and a pepper-fried egg served between a silky-smooth glazed donut. Because your heart is evil, and it needs to be stopped.

Taco Bell's Waffle Taco
Combining two things we love (waffles, tacos) with a breakfast patty and a scrambled egg, the only thing we hate about it is it's only available in three California stores.

A World Without Taco Bell

Just a sampling of the disasters that would befall mankind without The Bell.

You'd have to visit your weird incense-and-Birkenstocks friend from college for all your Dorito-based meals
And vegan Doritos nachos with soy sour cream and conflict-free olives can't hold a candle to the awesomeness of the Locos Taco.

"Gordita" would just be a name to call a fat kid
And bullying? In 2013, that's a jailing. So thank Taco Bell for co-opting the Spanish word for "little fatty," so people think you're just calling the neighborhood fatty something the strong might want to devour.

This dog would only be famous because of Beverly Hills Chihuahua
Yo no quiero that idea.

Like Food? Love Epic Meal Time

These Canadians don't need sanity...as long as they've got bacon strips. That's why we love them, hater.

Valuable Lessons we've learned from EMT

- Anything can be a sandwich. Anything can be a pizza.
- The secret ingredient is invariably some form of liquor. Rarely is it licorice.
- Cheese Curds. Replace your vegetables with them.
- No matter what, it isn't a meal without bacon.
- Don't put sushi on your pizza. Or do. We don't care.
- Yes. You can fry that. Rejoice.

EPIC MEAL TIME GLOSSARY

Now you're speaking their language!

Meat Blanket
A flat base of ground meat that can be built upon until caloric overload.

Chicks
Eggs. Because they're little baby chickens, and don't you forget it. "Chicks" may also refer to young ladies, which are also enjoyable.

Candy Bacon
Like dog treats for adults. Bacony, brown-sugary goodness.

Hangover
A grease deficiency.

WELCOME TO SMOSHVILLE

Behind our Scenes

When you show up at the SMOSH house, odds are you're going to leave with some kind of stain. In fact, the only thing that happens on set more often than one of us getting our hands, clothes, or faces dirty is that we accomplish something awesome. A lot of work goes into making our videos, and a lot of hands get dirty, both metaphorically and literally. Even if you follow us on Twitter and watch every deleted scene we've ever posted, you still won't see everything that goes on during a typical day on set. For example, did you know in this photo Ian isn't wearing any underwear? Now you do. Hooray?

Anthony typically wears headgear an hour before shooting to perfect his grin

The Magic Behind "Magic Wipes"

Anthony: What actually spawned the idea of the video was the landlord at the SMOSH house wanted to change out the carpet throughout the entire house and replace it with tile. So we were like "Oh my God, we can destroy the carpet before he gets rid of it. What can we do to really destroy some carpet?" But the landlord never switched out the carpet, so we had this script sitting around for like four months. We ended up shooting it with some old pieces of carpet that our props guy had.

Ian: A lot of times we don't pick right off the bat who's going to be whom. We look at who played the really dumb character last time. If I played a stupid character before, then Anthony should have a turn to play a really dumb character this time. It's only fair. And if a character is similar to something one of us has played, the other one of us will do it to avoid repetition.

Anthony: Ian wrote the headgear into the script early on.

Ian: We wanted a character that we couldn't quite understand, and... headgear is just comedy gold, so...

Anthony: We made it from stuff we found around the house and a mouthguard like the ones football players wear. I was wearing it all day.

Ian: He was spitting whenever he was talking. I'm sure he spat on me several times. It was gross.

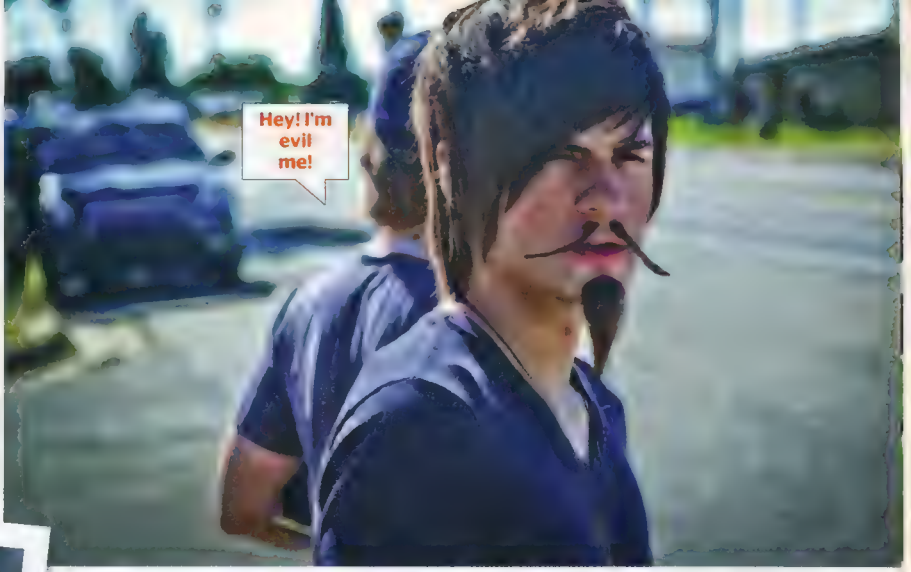
You know what would have made this video funnier? More headgear.

Yes, Sometimes There's Pee...

Believe it or not, there's a ton of work that goes into even the simplest of gags. For example, in the script for "Broken Foot," the closing bit involves Anthony throwing a biohazard bag full of urine at/onto Ian. The script simply says "Anthony throws the bag at Ian, which hits him in the face." While it would be fun to do it in one take with a real bag of pee, typically several dry runs (pun intended, +500 lame bonus) and multiple shots of the real deal are needed in order to ensure the moment of impact is captured just right. Plus, throwing bags of water at each other over and over again is always a good time.

We also cover the floor with plastic for a few reasons: (1) it makes clean-up a heck of a lot easier and (2) it helps maintain continuity if we're doing other shots throughout the day. The last thing you want is to be halfway through blocking a scene only to find you're standing in a puddle of fake pee (or worse, real pee) from an earlier shot.

We have an incredible crew who help organize and manage these types of gags, and keep us on task throughout our 12-hour days of shooting. Without them most SMOSH videos would just be the two of us, staring at each other, maybe playing a round or two of Pogs until one of us snaps and tosses a bag of pee at the other.



Art Imitates Life, or Whatever

Anthony: Most of the video for "Broken Foot" revolves around Ian bitching about how he has a broken foot and can't really do anything. Basically he's forcing me against my will...blackmailing me into helping him around the house and doing anything he wants. He says he's going to leak a Twilight fan fiction that I wrote if I don't help him. There's one part where he forces me to leave the house to go get him a corn dog, and I'm driving his car because my car is in the shop. His car is a stick shift, and he makes me feel really dumb about not being able to drive a stick shift. Which is a real thing. I honestly don't know how to drive stick.

Ian: In the script, Anthony has to run over this guy Stevie who's played by our producer, Ryan Todd. So he lurches forward and hits Ryan. The funny thing is, Anthony doesn't really know how to drive stick that well, and when we did the take of Ryan walking in front of the car, Anthony hit Ryan pretty hard...
Anthony: I did the take three times and every time he was like "More gas! More gas!" so by the fourth time, I was like "Alright, I'll give it more gas..." and it literally lunged forward and actually hit him in the leg and twisted his ankle, which got caught in the cement. He was OK. He's great. He was like "I'm cool, as long as we got the shot."

SCRIPTED REALITY

The Brief Life of a SMOSH Script

Believe it or not, we actually write most of our episodes ahead of time.

Long before an episode like "Magic Wipes" makes its way onto YouTube and beyond to millions of views, it starts as a series of characters (letters) and characters (people we'll later portray as part of a hilarious video) on a few pages, which are carefully analyzed by the production team then put through a process called "printing," where the data we compiled using script writing software is exported through a few cables and spools through toner and ink to become "scripts." Those scripts are distributed to Ian, Anthony, the crew, the President, and the Pope. Once everyone is on the same page (epic punage bonus x 1000) the real magic begins. Ian and Anthony go through the painstaking process of committing sentences they thought of themselves to memory. While most of the lines you'll hear in a typical video are directly from the script, many of them are improvised, which is why the deleted scenes and outtakes of our videos are almost as good as the videos themselves! Sometimes. Our scripts tend to take a beating during a typical day of shooting, often getting covered in fake puke, fake blood, actual puke, fake poop or any combination of those substances. We also carry tiny scripts (which we call "baby scripts" because they're adorable) in our back pockets while we're on set so that we can reference them while we're shooting, because it's hard to remember all your lines or what you've got to accomplish next when there's fake vomit on your face.

INT. KITCHEN

We see a clean kitchen floor. Suddenly CHOCOLATE MILK hits the floor, splashing all over the place.

PAUL (O.S.)
Oh no, looks like you got a stain on your floor.

The camera pans up to reveal PAUL and PAULIE standing next to the stain. Paul is a sleazy-looking guy, while Paulie is a "special" nerdy guy with dental headgear on. He is dressed in really weird 70s clothes. Paulie is really hard to understand with the headgear, and all his lines have to be subtitled as a result.

What do you do? There's no way that stain will come off.

PAULIE
Unless you have some magic!

Paulie holds up BOX OF P BROTHERS MAGIC WIPES.

PAUL (CONT'D)

We should do that again, no one can understand you.

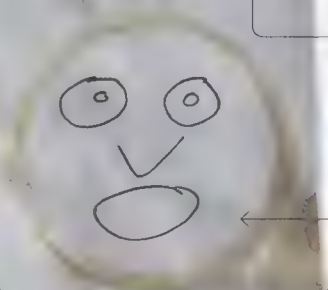
INT. WEIRD BACKDROP - MOMENTS LATER

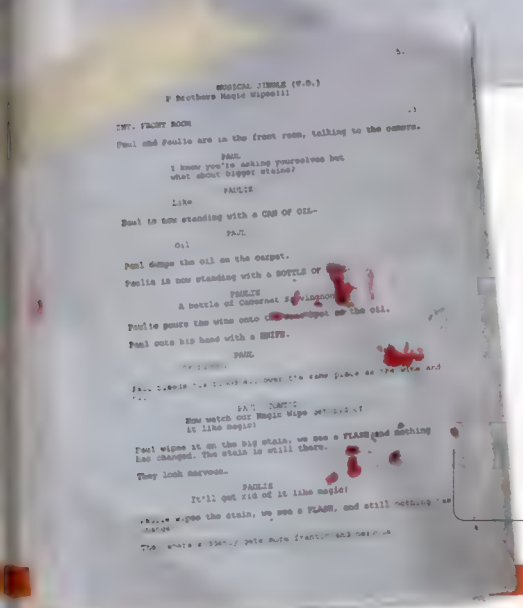
They reset.

PAUL
I'm Paul-

Fake blood is worse than tomato sauce when it comes to stains. If there's fake blood in a scene it will invariably ruin everything white that you care about.

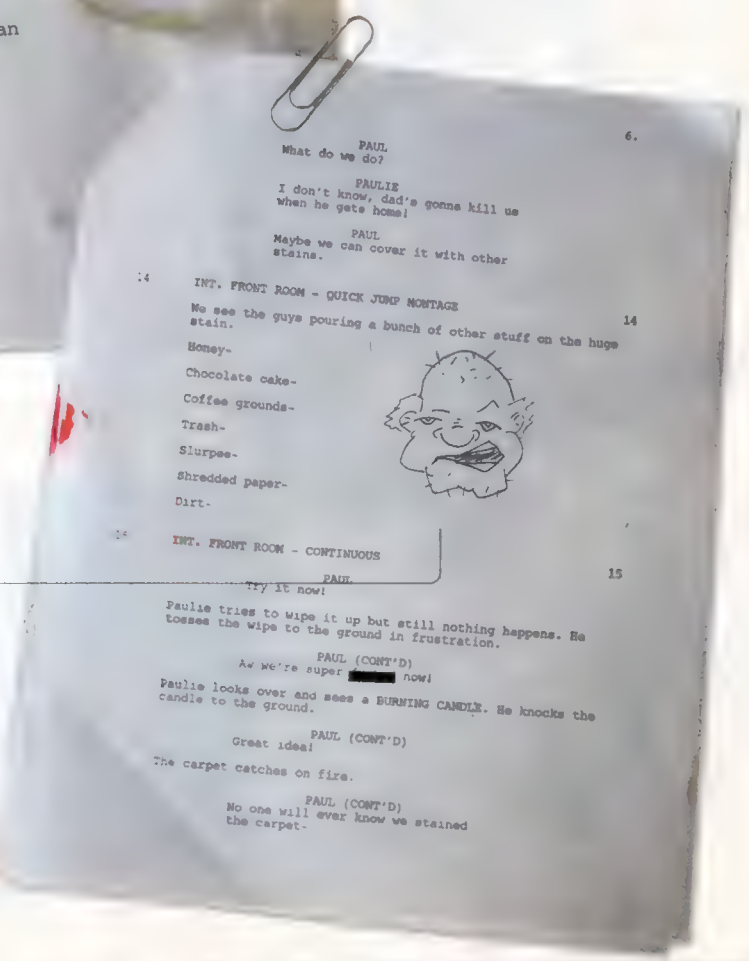


Coffee is often the lifeblood that keeps us running on set. But if you drink too much you start to see people in your stains.



Sometimes members of the cast and crew doodle on the scripts while we're working on them. This page features a sketch of Ian in 12 years.

Real blood. Anthony had a hangnail.



6.

PAUL
What do we do?

PAULIE
I don't know, dad's gonna kill us when he gets home!

PAUL
Maybe we can cover it with other stains.

14 INT. FRONT ROOM - QUICK JUMP MONTAGE 14

We see the guys pouring a bunch of other stuff on the huge stain.

15 INT. FRONT ROOM - CONTINUOUS 15

PAUL
Try it now!

Paulie tries to wipe it up but still nothing happens. He tosses the wipe to the ground in frustration.

PAUL (CONT'D)
Aw we're super [redacted] now!

Paulie looks over and sees a BURNING CANDLE. He knocks the candle to the ground.

PAUL (CONT'D)
Great idea!

The carpet catches on fire.

PAUL (CONT'D)
No one will ever know we stained the carpet.

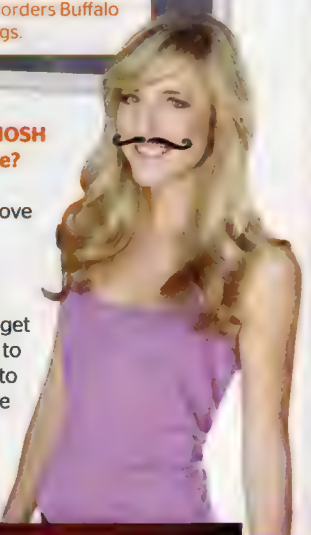
Q & A

What is your favorite part about working with Ian and Anthony?
They're hilarious. Like, off set just as much as they are on set. They make working with them fun and lighthearted.

Is there a worst part?
The pressure to not disappoint. It's Ian and Anthony's vision and it's their work and they're right there. You don't want to ever let them down. That, and you never know when you might get thrown up on.

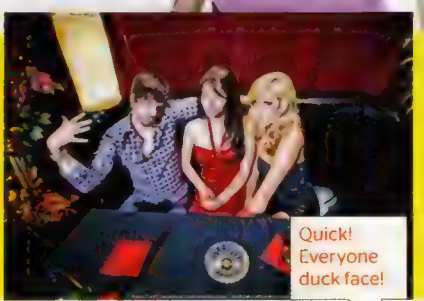
If you had to live with one SMOSH dude forever, who would it be? And why?
I would live with Ian because I love his mom.

You think that's going to make Anthony jealous?
Yeah, but he's going to have to get over it. I could try to make it up to him? Maybe I can promise not to throw food at him anymore. I've thrown food at him in a lot of episodes.



Matching outfits are a winner!

Somebody must really love fajitas!



Quick! Everyone duck face!

CREW INTERVIEW

Mad Props

From fart machines to Furbies, SMOSH Art Director Patrick Egan gets Ian and Anthony anything they need for their videos.

What's a typical day of shooting like for you?
It usually involves arriving early to get set up. Later, I'm usually either dressing the next scene or hanging on set to perform whatever gags the guys want, like their recurring vomit gags.

How did you get into this line of work?
I went from production assistant jobs to filming weddings. I eventually made a deal with an actress I had met: If she would be in my short film for free, I'd cover her SMOSH shifts when she was in school. She later became the casting director for SMOSH.

What's the biggest problem you run into when it comes to supplying stuff for videos?
Props. Sometimes Ian and Anthony want to reference an old toy from their childhood, like a Furby. I couldn't find a freaking Furby anywhere in town. A friend of a friend living a half hour out of town had one. This lady literally lived on a farm and let a stranger borrow her kid's toy!

What has been your favorite video to work on so far, and why?
I loved doing the "DITTO" episode. We were making fun of The Thing, which is one of my favorite horror movies! But ultimately, I think the video we're all most proud of was the Assassin's Creed video. It was the biggest thing we had ever done. I had a box truck filled with all kinds of period-specific props and set pieces we were able to rent from a local theater company.

Where do you find the props? How much is creation vs. creative repurposing of already existing stuff?
Mostly creative repurposing of things that already exist. It can also involve acquiring specific stuff and adding things to create something new. Like the "Gas Buster" episode where we just took a booster seat and added some electronic gears and switches to it. Now it's a machine that makes your farts smell good.
